Stabilization of the coal industry and prevention of strikes will not be possible until there has been worked out some common basis for wages and employment in the union and non-union fields, according to a letter addressed to President Harding by the Constitutional Society of West Virginia.

The letter, copies of which were sent to the members of the Coal Commission, asks the President that special attention be devoted to the non-union fields, and declares that these fields should be made to respect agreements entered into in the future between the miners' unions and the operators.

Germany would be willing to assume obligations to pay 50,000,000,000 gold marks, as mentioned by Mr. Mitchell, provided deductions of past payments were made.

German bankers say that currency reforms and political stability cannot be obtained before the reparations are reduced. If it were not obliged to buy large quantities of foreign securities the Governm to could reduce the note circulation, which is now impossible. The bankers do not look upon inflation as the fundamental cause of Germany's financial misfortune, and declare that a restricted inflation is necessary until prices return to normal.

With the reparations reduced the note circulation could be reduced progressively. The German Government has egreed to the issuing of new gold currency notes redeemable in six months at the dollar rate plus 3 per cent. Interest. The project of introducing gold currency has been weakened because the Relchsbank refuses to part with its gold reserve of 1,000,000,000 marks. The Government has offered to use its coal

LIBERALISM CHARGE

Main among this number and that you will reconsider your ruling which will cause a loss of hundreds of millions of dollars of taxation to the Treasury without any recombility.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, in his sormon yesterday in the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Eleventh street, did not refer to the controversy on Liberalism into which the Presbytery of Philadelphia has been drawing him by complaint to the General Assembly that the teaching from Dr. Fosdick's pulpit should be made to conform to the Westminster Confession. Dr. Fosdick, himself a Baptist and filling the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at the invitation of its congregation, has said the will not join the discussion. Dieventh street, did not refer to the controversy on Liberalism into which the Presbytery of Philadelphia has been drawing him by complaint to the General Assembly that the teaching from Dr. Fosdick's pulpit should be made to conform to the Westminster Confession. Dr. Fosdick, himself a Baptist and filling the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at the invitation of its congregation, has said the invitation of its congregation, has said the will not join the discussion. Yesterday Dr. Fosdick preached on self-surrender, advancing the thought that although religion had its most intense moment in self-surrender it is, an attitude not typical of the modern mina and spirit. Quests for knowledge, liberty and love, he said, are closed worlds to men vithout self-surrender, which he also defined as the attitude of reverence. This attitude, he said, has been marred by the mastery that science gained over the mysteries.

"When the scientists have finished their diagrams," he added, "thank them and look for more. They open the door into the depths of the spirit."
